*Complete guide! Its such a great study. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never.
It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Excerpt: . . . my wife, my love has passed to botanical and biological subjects, and of them I have made many hundreds of negatives. One of our favorite collecting grounds is along the old Georgetown Canal; and last spring I made several views of this historic locality, of which an heretofore unpublished one is reproduced in Figure i. The scene here shown is hardly more than a couple of miles from the environs of Washington, and it is readily reached by the suburban electric cars. About five hundred yards to the right, below the towpath, one comes to the Maryland banks of the Potomac River, and all up through that region the out-of-door naturalist finds, at all seasons, much to interest him. At one place the Papaw trees grow luxuriantly; and wherever we find them we are sure to meet with speci mens of the wonderful black and white Zebra butterfly, with the long tails to its lower wings, starting from a brilliant scarlet spot on either side. This insect is a great favorite with butterfly collectors on account of the remarkable variations it presents, and I have published photographs of it many times. In the spring, flowers of many varieties are found in this region, and for this reason it is also a favorite one for the local botanists. At this season we meet with such plants as the purple Trillium in full bloom, the dogs-tooth violet, several kinds of violets, the star of Bethlehem, cowslip,...
